

This image is a high-contrast, black and white scan of a vertical object. It appears to be a close-up of a book's spine or a similar textured surface. The left side is a bright, almost white vertical strip, while the rest of the image is a dark, heavily textured black area. There are some lighter, irregular patches and speckles throughout, suggesting a rough or aged material. The overall composition is vertical and abstract due to the high contrast.
